LORD Wolseley fells a good story of a certain bittle. The road in the roar of the position was full of fugitives. Many had not only lost their heads, but their breath also, from the long distances they had run. A little fat sergeant, perspiring at every pore and thoroughly blown, had reached a point of safety, and was about to rest a while. He perceived a private of his own him. "Come down out of that cave at once." said the sergeant, with all the air of the commanding officer ordering his man to "fallin," The private from his position of advantage answered. "No, sergeant: you're not going to have this hole-not if I know it |"

Three gentlemen from the hills beyond His lordship said the ones of going, and of came to town, that is, to Yaumati, and with them brought in tow each a fine old bull. The country folk had not by half seeing capacity to take in all the windrous aights that there awaited them—neither had their charges : * they gazed from side to side, part in awe and part in admiration until they ambled fair upon a wild-looking Afghan, dressed in the gaudy gear of his country and proud of the impression he was projucing on the minds of local beauty. The countrymen looked paralyzed : the buils were petrified—but only for a moment. With one awful toar two of them burst free and with heads and tails erect thundered back towards their native glades : the third sniffed the air, glanced once at his flying mates and then made for the soldier (be was one of Hongkong's "Very Own," poor fellow). The Afghan was agile and dedged the thrust but when he realized the full dimensions of the foc -he fled, and the clouds of fleecy drapery that he dropped la bis wild career are still cherished in many an honest home in Yaumati. The chase was a long one but by the time the tull had got within business distance there was so little left of his once balloon-like prey that he turned from him in scorn and charged right at a witless ricksha coolie who stood by to save his "barrow." This was tossed high in the air and as the wheel spun round the poor coolie had displayed before him such a mystifying Zodiac that to this moment he cannot tell whether Taurus was within the circle or not: but he does know the had no sooner touched terra firma than the bull was at him again. Taurus took time this journey and aimed well; in fact he would have fairly done for the unfortunate fellow had he not taken a fancy to a flying figure here spled in the distance. By this time a good old frenzy had been worked up; Sikh policemen, lukongs, vickshas and many other obstacles were upset in the run but it seemed as though the animal had a Van Epps-like mortgage on the life of his original quarry for he turned neither to one side or to the other but shot on, apparently cheered if not consoled by the fact that he was gaining on his prey-another moment, in fact, and all would be over, but (there's generally a butt or two in a bull story), just then a "Bobby" came along and with Napoleonic rapidity took in the s'tuation— and fired. The shot, however, had no other effect than to madden the foaming animal a shade or two more if possible and off it tore towards the bay. The police were soon in full pursuit and securing a steam-launch hurried after poor "Billy" who was swimming with might and main for Stonecuiters'. A great deal more might be written of the stern chase that ensued but suffice it to say that one straight shot got home and the game was over, The moral to be drawn from this little story should be obvious to all, but especially so to the Defendant, sworn, stated :- I never received Alghan who walked out with his flaming head-

October 19th, 1893. It may be wondered why your correspondent has not forworded earlier intelligence of the departure of the new notorious coolie ship Tetarior, but the fact is I have been momentarily expecting her return to this port. She did sail hence for Braz'l with a cargo of c olles on the 16 h in t. Monday last, but absent an episode eccurred on board prior to her away by the advocates of "free emigration" to foreign countries; this was the hoisting of the signal "Mutiny on board; assistance required." In response to this a party of water police were despatched to the assistance of the Captain, and the gun-host Bengo was also ordered to take up a position close to the Telaries, to ascertain the nature of the trouble and to render help if necessary. "So far I have had no opportunity of seeing any of the officers of the gun-boat nor getting any really reliable information on the subject. The police are not over-communicative, neither will any of the persons who are interested in or connected with the coolie-traffic in any way let the "cat" slip as to the origin and extent of showed that the blood was still fluid. the "mutiny." It is, however, stated that a quarrel arose between the coolles and the paymaster, and that the latter was assaulted. In my opinion this statement requires a more than ordinarily large lump of salt to be conveniently swallowed, but until the real facis are forthcoming it will probably pass current. The tendency of the labouring population in rural districts to migrate to the cities is receiving forcible illustration in Germany. Not only has the city of Berlin increased in population nearly -200 per cent In the last quarter of a century -- a rate of progress four times as rapid as that of London-but almost all the great towns in Germany exhibit a similar tendency to augment their population at the expense of the country.

HOW DID THEY COME TO DO IT?

Oxry to think that any man-in the daytime, with his eyes open, not being orazy and not wanting to commit spicide-should walk straight into a canal or a river! Only to think of that, I say! Yet a good many did it in and around London in Christmas week, 1891. The dense fog it was, of course, that made them. People could hardly see sig feet shead open in Japan, the length of wires being 44,314 of their noses | may be less at times, and in some spots. For you understand the difference between" On an average nine people are sentenced to | mere darkness and a fog. In the dark, no matter penal servitude for life every year in English how black it is, you can always see the lights if there are any. But a fog! A fog is to have your eyes put out; it is blindness. As for ship wrocks and other calamities due to fogs-why, there's no end to them. The London papers have wondered why somebody hasn't invented a way to scatter fogs. Ah, yes, why ? Here's a woman's story about a fog, one of those thick mists that hang over most of us twelve months in the year. She says that from April to September, 1889, she was too ill to have any pleasure or comfort. This was a thing to notice, inasmuch as her disposition was naturally cheerful and lively. The trouble, whatever you call it, came on her gradually, much as that Kerckhoven's expedition was completely a fog rises. At first she simply felt languid. Very little exertion made her tired. Her breath came to be very short, too, and she often felt faint. She couldn't est; that is, not with any reliah, and her sleep was broken up into maps and snatches instead of being solid and straight away, as good sleep always is. Her spirits were dull and depressed. To be sure.

How else could they be? She had great pain in the region of the heart, which frightened her, as it would you, for the heart is a vital organ and we are properly scared when, there's anything ailing it. Every morsel she ats distressed her. Even the swallowing of a mouthful of water was a painful matter. For several, weeks she went on in this fashion. She kept on with her work in the house and shop (a bakery), but it was as much as ever.

Simple medicines, such as we all know of these she tried, but no good came of it. So she next consulted the family doctor, a man who has a large of their holdings to tpractice and is considered very clever. He examined The Liquidation Committee, her carefully and then said, " Mrs. Plowright, you are suffering from congestion of the liver, heart disease, This was a statement fit to make the poor woman give up in despair. Indeed, it nearly did. But the doctor was right; that is, from his point of view. He treated the patient for some time. For a short space occasionally, he relieved her; then she was bad as ever. " Once in a while," she says, "my heart almost s'opped beating, and I looked and felt like a dying person." This, she was told, was the incurable complaint called anging pectorie; but it wasn't, not anything like it. Still, it was serious and dangerous. Her letter ends in these words : I had read in a book about Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, and my husband had taken some of it and thought highly of it. But I had not much faith in it. I began by taking fifteen drops, but as this had no effect I took thirty drops and followed the directions. This does suited ms, and after having used up the bottle I felt better. I could eat and digest food, the pain in my chest and side gradually went away, and after taking two bottles more I was well, and have been well ever
